INSTITUTE AFTERMATH.

EDITOR THE CHRONICLE:

The West Tennessee Farmers' Institute at Jackson, which closed on the 20th instant, was a great success in every way. A large number of farmers hailing from every nook and corner of the western division of the old Volunteer State promptly and gratefully responded to the call of Commissioner of Agriculture Ogilvie and assembled in the large hall or chapel of the Southwestern Baptist University in the little city of Jackson on the morning of the 18th, and continued their labors for three days, holding in all seven sessions.

This was one of the most enthusiastic farmers' meetings and one of the largest ever held in West Tennessee. The entire country had been drawn upon to secure the very best talent available to instruct our farmers in the modern arts of agriculture—truck farming, dairying, road-making, etc., and the speeches were all that could be expected and full of valuable suggestions.

We were thoroughly instructed in everything that appertains to agriculture in its various branches except just one thing, and that was the very thing that "yours truly" has been searching for, lo! these many years—how to make a crop without work! They told us how to do the thing, but they didn't tell us how to do it without work, so I guess, boys, we might just as well roll up our sleeves and wade right in. Here's three cheers and a hurrah to the man or woman that makes an honest living by honest labor.

The institute, as is its custom biennially, reorganized, and notwithstanding the old officers have held their positions for eight consecutive years, they were all re-elected by acclamation, without a single contest or dissenting voice, so faithfully and satisfactorily have they discharged their duties.

The little county of Benton made a very creditable showing at Jackson. At least fifty-three of our best and hardest working farmers, including Will and Tom Morris, Irvin Gibson, Tom Dodd and "yours truly," were there, and many others were anxious to go. Two good farmers—not the "hot air" sort—hailing from the eleventh district, and who, in accordance with the Bible injunction, "eat bread in the sweat of their face," were so anxious to go that, failing to get a free pass, they paid their way to Jackson with their hard-earned "cash," (as a Mr. Roosevelt would have us spell it.) I hope to be pardoned for adding that it pained us very much to see these hard-working men pay their way to a farmers meeting when so many of our "hot air" farmers had free passes. Mr. Ogilvie says we "get there with both feet" when we go after free passes.

Benton County had a larger delegation at Jackson than any other county of its size in West Tennessee. However, our representation dwindled away until there were only six present at the close of the institute. We were very sorry so many of our delegates left before the close, from the fact that we had the best part of the program last.

Very truly,
I. N. BRIDGES,
Secretary Benton County Farmers Institute.
